How to bypass x ray machine

URL of this page: X-rays are a type of radiation called electromagnetic waves. The X-ray image creates images of the interior of your body. The images show the parts of your body in different shades of black and white. This is because different tissues absorb different amounts of radiation. Calcium in the bones absorbs x more rays, so the bones look white. Fats and other soft tissues absorb less and look gray. The air absorbs less, so the lungs look black. The most familiar use of x-rays is the control of fractures (broken bones), but x-rays are also used in other ways. For example, x-thoracic rays can detect pneumonia. Mammograms use x-rays to search for breast cancer. When you have an X-ray, you can wear a lead apron to protect some parts of your body. The amount of radiation you get from an X-ray is small. For example, a chest X-ray provides a dose of radiation similar to the amount of radiation that is naturally exposed to the environment for 10 days.
